Enjoy the journey of your home project. Here are some basic guides:

- Do not follow trends blindly as you may end up splurging on items that do not suit your home. Know your preferences and needs and discuss your ideas with the family. Then, work out the suitable styles and themes for your home. Research for home designs can be done as early as your new house hunting begins!

- Do research and compare the products and services for your home project. It is advisable to purchase products and services from reliable brands or companies. Refer to friends who have recently done up their homes.

- Plan and schedule your renovation project. List down what should be undertaken in sequence and plot out the time needed for every phase. Be realistic and avoid last minute changes for unnecessary delays.

- Always remember that you get what you pay for. Do not expect a low cost item to be highly functional and durable. Buy reasonably priced items based on quality to avoid disappointment, future expenses and the pain of replacements.

- “Design for Logic” – House designing should not be limited to beauty only but equally covers functions, overall concept, item placement and space flow. If you need help, speak to architects and interior designers. They are trained to do just that and can provide you with a design that is both beautiful and functional.
